I will be at the public meeting in Park City tomorrow and then I am heading down to Durango. The data management effort for the Animas is now well under control. We are completely caught up on sample results and we are now able to meet the 15 minute window for getting data out to anyone who needs. It seems like many decisions still need to be made before any data is released publically and my focus on that project will now focus to supporting our own field operations.

Hope you get some rest,

M
